Stories of Encounter, Trade, and Reconciliation: Constructing Histories of the Past, Present, and Future

Dr. Carolyn Podruchny

Department of History, York University

Carolyn Podruchny is an associate professor of history at York University in Toronto. Her research focuses on the relationships forged between Indigenous peoples and French newcomers in northern North America. Her personal and professional goal is to make sense of Canada's colonial past and find a way forward in reconciliation by exploring the history of encounters. Her first monograph, Making the Voyageur World: Travelers and Traders in the North American Fur Trade (2006) examines French Canadian voyageurs that worked in the North American fur trade based out of Montreal, and ranging to the Great Lakes, the Great Plains, northern woodlands, and the subarctic. She co-edited, with Laura Peers, Gathering Places: Aboriginal and Fur Trade

Histories (2010), which illuminates new theories and methodologies in ethnohistory in central North America, spanning the Canadian and U.S. borderlands; and co-edited, with Nicole St-Onge and Brenda Macdougall, a volume exploring Metis history in the same region, entitled Contours of a People: Metis Family, Mobility and History (2012). She is currently writing a book about the meeting of stories in the fur trade.
