

Supporting Students

Recognize, Respond, Refer, Reflect

Step 1: Recognizing Signs of Distress

Stress and distress are common feelings for many students. Each student is going to have their own unique way of dealing with stressful experiences and their emotions. There are many different reasons why a student may approach you for support, or appear in need of support. Being able to recognize a student in distress is the first step.

Signs of stress or distress may include physical, emotional or behavioural, academic concerns and/or obvious expressions of safety concerns.

Safety Concerns

Examples include statements about suicide or death, suspicions or paranoia, threats towards/ from others.

Emotions & Behaviours

Examples include evident anxiety; unusually withdrawn or animated; feelings of helplessness; crying; appearing emotionless or unusually calm; memory loss; inability to concentrate; seeming hypervigilant or panicked.

Physical Distress

Examples include exhaustion; falling asleep in class; visible change in appearance; or visible injuries.

Academic Concerns

Examples include concerning content on assignments; extreme perfectionism; extreme disorganization; repeated absences; missed assignments or exams.

Student Support Request

What Is It?

Student Support Request is a referral-based early alert program that provides timely support to students who may be facing challenges.

How Do I Use It?

1. Log into WebAdvisor or go to Nipissingu.ca and choose the "Need Support?" button in the top right corner.
2. Select "Student Support Request".
3. Type the first and last name of the student or their Nipissing University student identification number into the MS form (you may also choose to submit anonymously if this information is unknown).

Step 4: Reflect

What Type of Support Did I Provide?

Did the student require immediate assistance, a referral or follow-up? Was there a safety concern?

Did I Consider My Own Limits?

It is okay to not know the answer to a question and to set personal boundaries. Encourage students to call on other resources provided in this folder when possible.

How Am I Feeling?

It is common to feel upset or anxious after dealing with a student's distress. Get help for yourself. If you need to debrief, or have a question, please contact Mental Health & Wellbeing at x4507. Further support is available through your Employee Assistance Program (EAP), contact Human Resources for details.

Step 2: Respond

A supportive response and approach can make all the difference, but that does not mean that it will come easy. This also does not mean that you need to be an expert. It is important to remember that it is okay to not have all the answers. Being aware of these simple steps can help you to provide a supportive response.

Starting the Conversation

- Meet in safe & private location
- Be open to listening
- Express your concern for the student
- Ensure the student is open to talking further

Provide a Supportive Referral

- Share that support is available
- Create an individual plan of next steps for the student by providing relevant information from this folder, share who referrals are being made to, discuss who the student already considers supports
- Summarize the plan including when you will follow up with the student

Listen & Respect Confidentiality

- Take a non-judgmental approach
- Validate feelings of stress
- Communicate any limits to confidentiality
- Limits may include concerns about student’s safety and/or professional responsibilities

Follow Up Plan

- Follow up based on your plan with the student
